Perspectives on Burke's political thought in Australia

Conservatism, libertarianism, distributism and the radical centre

Edmund Burke's political thought has had an immense influence throughout the English-speaking world. This conference will reflect on approaches to Burke's thought across the political spectrum in Australia today.

Speakers

Professor Gregory Melleuish discusses the social and political thought of Sir Robert Menzies.

William Dawes discusses the current interaction between libertarianism and conservatism within the Australian Liberal Party.

Dr Michael Easson AM discusses the influence of Burke's thought in the Australian Labor Party.

Dr Shireen Morris discusses the role of conservatives in achieving a radical centre solution in contemporary political debates.

Respondents

Dr Jesse Norman MP is the PM Glynn Lecturer on Religion, Law and Public Life for 2018.

Dr Adrian Pabst is the Sir Peter Lawler Visiting Fellow for 2018 at the PM Glynn Institute and the 2018 Religion & Global Society Lecturer at the Institute for Ethics & Society.
